JANESVILLE, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 15

"A ROSE BY ANOTHER NAME"

The Chicago Herald, which is a rabid free trader, prints under the foregoing heading an editorial article condemning any sort of a protective duty for the alleged reason that it is a tax, no matter by what other name it may be called, and then concludes as follows:—

If every article which people buy was plainly marked so as to show how much of its price was in the nature of a tax to the producer, to be used in paying a bounty to the producer, there would soon be an organized opposition to a protective tariff that congress could not resist. But the advocates of protection "work in a mysterious way his wonders to perform." He invented the tariff and deceptive combination of words—protection to American industry. He never explains that protecting one industry means taxing another.

One of the most interesting studies connected with the tariff, is that of prices. Under the Morrill tariff there has been a gradual decline of prices of manufactured articles, and it does not require an argument, but simply a reference to historical facts, to prove the falsity of the Herald's statement that a protective duty is in the name of a tax. The Herald seems bent on adopting the views of Mr. Cleveland, that a duty on imports, no matter what it may be, adds so much to the price of the article on which the duty is placed. A statement farther from the truth could not be made. It won't do in answer to the Herald to put in a general denial and then rest the point, but the better way is to present some facts that every intelligent person can clearly see and understand.

Take salt, for example. If the duty on that article enhanced the price thereof, it should sell for double the price it does, but the fact is the price is less than the duty! Take all articles made of cotton as another example, and the retail prices at the stores are about the rate of the duty on imported goods. So that if the Herald and Mr. Cleveland are right, and Mr. G. is not included, salt and cotton goods would be given away without money and with a price, if the tariff were removed, for the simple reason that their alleged enhancing of the cost by the duty is more than the retail price demanded!

Steel rails, according to the Chicago Herald, should sell for $50 a ton, for there is a duty of $17 a ton, but the ruling price is from $24 to $33 per ton, when under free trade they cost nearly four times that amount. Suppose the Herald's theory were applied to blankets, in what a ridiculous position that paper would be placed! You can buy an excellent American woolen gray blanket for from $2.50 to $3.00, and in free trade England, the price is only 30 cents less per pair, so that from the free trade point of view the blankets should be bought in the United States for thirty cents a pair, less than one-fifth what the wool cost with nothing for making or for selling.

If you should carry the illustrations into the line of woolen clothing, the position of the Herald and Mr. Cleveland would be extremely ridiculous in the sight of all intelligent men. If the amount of the duty on woollens is added to the price, how is it that one can buy a good ready-made suit which any business man need not feel ashamed to wear, for from $10 to $15? If the duty doubled the price as the Herald says it does, the suits of the ten and fifteen dollar grade should be bought for $5 and $7.50, which would give the farmers only half the market price for the wool, and the men who made the suits, less than a dollar a day for their work.

The condition of things demanded by the Chicago Herald and Mr. Cleveland would drive all farmers and all manufacturers and mechanics into bankruptcy. A farmer cannot afford to raise wool for half the price he now receives, neither can American men and women engaged in mechanical work, afford to have their wages divided by 2.

THE TRIUMPHS OF STOCK SHIPPING.

It has been a number of years since beef cattle were as low in price as they were this winter. There have been given several reasons for this unexpected decline in price, and the most natural one is the immense supply in the territories and the new states. The demand is not equal to the supply, at least cattle men have to force their sales in many instances, and this is not done, and cannot be done, without effecting the price.

There is a special effort made by railway companies to ship stock at low rates from Kansas, Nebraska and Dakota, to Chicago. The stock growers of Wisconsin, or Iowa, or Illinois, are not in a condition to compete with the cattle men of the more western states. To show what the stock growers of the latter states have to contend with, and to illustrate how surprising are the triumphs of railway enterprise in shipping stock to Chicago, the Gazette will give an incident.

A short time ago some cattle reached St. Paul for shipment to Chicago. They were placed in the hands of the Chicago, Burlington & Northern railway. The fifteen car loads made a special train, equipped with air brake cars, and were started out of St. Paul twelve minutes ahead of schedule time of the limited express, and went through to Chicago fifty-five minutes in advance of the limited! When a railway company can gather stock from the boundless prairies of the Dakotas or Northern Minnesota, and transport them over its road at the rate of thirty miles an hour with perfect safety, it is no wonder that the live stock market is depressed. During the past fall cattle were shipped from Kansas City to Chicago with the speed of a passenger train almost, for only twenty four dollars a car, while the stock men within a hundred miles of Chicago, have to pay seventeen dollars.

With the vast herds of cattle in the newer prairie states and with the marvelous railway facilities for transporting them to the great stock market of the world, it is not surprising that beef cattle are low in price.

It was rather unfortunate for Mr. Ommange, of New York, that he should offer in the house of representatives, this resolution:

Resolved, That there be appropriated from the treasury of the United States the sum of $5,000 to erect a bronze statue of the late Samuel J. Tilden, to be placed in the center of the rotunda of the capitol. That on a tablet at the base of said statue there shall be conspicuously engraved these words:

"SAMUEL J. TILDEN,
NINETEENTH PRESIDENT OF THE
UNITED STATES
ELECTED, BUT NOT SEATED."

That on the right of the square base shall be engraved the date of birth, election, and death of such president, and that on the opposite side shall be engraved an eagle with a snake in its talons, and under them these words:

"For the right."

The democrats thought this a very cunning joke on the republicans, but when Mr. Sweeney, of Iowa, rose to inquire whether the inscription on the monument should be put in cipher, there was loud applause on the republican side of the house, and a glum silence among the democrats.

In an editorial on the Australian ballot the Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle quotes from the letter written by William E. Russell, late democratic candidate for governor of Massachusetts, in which he says: "I do not think there has ever been in this state an election so quiet, orderly, and free from intimidation, corruption, or any improper influence as we had last November under this new ballot law," and comments on this by saying: "This blanket-sheet ballot will not take in the south." To be sure, the law would not take well in the south. A quiet, orderly election, free from intimidation, corruption, or any improper influence, as Mr. Russell speaks of, is not the kind of an election the southern balloters want. Southern democratic speeches depend on intimidation, corruption and improper influences—always.

One of the most cruel murders the south has seen for a long time was that committed by Richard Hawes in Alabama one year ago last December. He drowned his wife and two daughters in an artificial lake, and two days after the murder he married a Miss Story. The people of Birmingham became terribly excited over the murder, and suspecting Hawes, caused his arrest the next day after his marriage and while on his bridal tour. A mob attempted to hang him, but the interference of the sheriff, which was unfortunate at the time, caused several innocent persons to be killed, including the postmaster of the city. After a long delay Hawes was convicted of murder, and will be hanged on the 28th of February.

Madison Democrat: If the republican senate should refuse to admit Senator Bruce, on the ground that he is not eligible, not being an inhabitant of Ohio, they would come nearer a righteous decision than they generally do in case of claimants of the opposite party.

Extinguishing Fire with Gas. An eminent scientist has evolved the theory that water as an element to extinguish flames in large and high buildings is a failure. He claims that when combustion evolves a certain intense degree of heat the water thrown upon the flames emits a powerful volume of hydrogen which burns with frightful fury. This scientist sets up the theory that these fires must be treated in a different manner, and expresses the belief that gas will be the successful weapon with which to fight fire at some future day. Gas has been quite extensively used in close rooms, but in the open air the gas evaporates and soon loses its strength.

BEGAN A LIFE SENTENCE.THE CRONIN ASSASSINS IN JOLIET.

The Motion for a New Trial Overruled and Sentence Pronounced on Three.

Little Kunze Alone Gets a New Trial. With a Promise of His Liberty.

The Other Three Taken to Joliet and Put Behind the Penitentiary Bars.

Chicago, Jan. 15.—Three of the assassins of Dr. P. H. Cronin are in the penitentiary at Joliet. Daniel Coughlin, Patrick O'Sullivan, and Martin Burke were hurried from the jail to the 9 o'clock train on the Chicago & Alton road Tuesday evening, and by 11 o'clock they had entered upon a life term of penal service to the State.

The great trial was brought to an end Tuesday when Judge McConnell formally refused Coughlin, O'Sullivan and Burke a new trial, and sentenced them, in accordance with the finding of the jury that tried them to life imprisonment at hard labor. John Kunze, whom the jury let off with a sentence of three years, was granted a new trial. Judge McConnell estimated that the jury had been misled by the testimony of the "Little Dutchman," as he has come to be known, who shortly be restored to his liberty.

In many respects the last day of this remarkable trial was the most interesting of any since the fatal Sunday morning when Dr. Cronin's disappearance was first noted. The court proceedings were unmarked by any demonstrations save for little Kunze's exclamations, and the trip to the penitentiary was as grave and orderly as if it were a funeral party. A funeral indeed it really was for the three miscreants who so shortly before had stepped out from the shadow of the gallows.

Arguing for a New Trial.

The morning session of Judge McConnell's court was entirely occupied by Judge Wing and Mr. Donahoe in arguing their motions for a new trial for the four defendants. Judge Wing confined himself entirely to the composition of the jury, which he held was not only bad but illegal. He contended that at least five jurors had been selected in a spirit directly antagonistic to the law, and that Juror Clark's case was the worst of all. Mr. Donahoe talked principally about little Kunze. Once or twice he stepped aside from this line to get in a word or two for O'Sullivan, but the little German's case offered such a brighter field for eloquence and argument that Donahoe could not leave it alone. It was 1 o'clock when the case of Kunze was concluded, and Judge Longenecker promptly announced on behalf of the State that no reply would be offered to the arguments. This apparently rather staggered Forrest, who, despite his private assertions of the day previous to the contrary, was eager to make the closing argument. Judge Longenecker's statement, however, rendered his silence obligatory.

Judge McConnell's Decision.

It was nearly 3 o'clock before Judge McConnell was ready to finally dispose of the motion for a new trial, and the lawyers and prisoners had been patiently waiting for him for over half an hour. His opinion was delivered rapidly and was very brief. In disposing of Kunze he admitted that he discredited the evidence of young James, the lad who saw Kunze washing his feet in the window of the upper flat at 117 Clark street. So far as the others were concerned, he was entirely satisfied that the evidence against them was overwhelming. The prisoners watched the judge and listened to his words with intense interest. Coughlin was very pale, and the expression of his face was grave and troubled. O'Sullivan's lips were closed tight, his hands were clenched and his face drawn into heavy seams that made him look like an old man. Burke, who seemed to be careless of what was going on, and he occasionally smiled at little Kunze, who was trembling from head to foot with suppressed excitement. Kunze, when Judge McConnell ordered a new trial for him, had jumped to his feet and in broken English thanked the court for what he had done.

The Prisoners Speak.

When Judge McConnell reached the others he asked Coughlin if he had any thing to say why sentence should not be passed on him. The big ex-detective was on his feet in a moment. He directed at his glittering little eyes straight at the court and said in a firm voice: "Ver honor, 'I am innocent. This crime was committed by persons I don't know. I was convicted by perjury." With a nervous bow to the court to indicate that he had finished he reached across the prisoners row, seized John Kunze's hand, and wrung it heartily. Tears of gratitude and joy sprang into the little fellow's eyes, and it was only after an effort that he was able to avoid crying out as he did the day the jury rendered its verdict.

O'Sullivan, looking grim and determined, was on his feet before Coughlin sank back in his chair. "I, too, your honor, am innocent," he said, "and I feel that some day the world will know it. I have been convicted by perjury."

Patrick O'Sullivan's testimony. I am not here to ask for mercy. All I ask for is justice. If I am innocent of this crime, I have not had justice; but if I am guilty, the State has not had justice."

Martin Burke, with his long, heavy face glowing, his little eyes snapping, and his jaws working like an automatic machine, followed O'Sullivan. "I'm innocent, too," he said. "In England I always knew they put perjured witnesses on the stand, but I never knew they did it in America." When he said this Martin sat down, looking triumphant and happy. He seemed to feel that he had unloaded a great mental burden. A minute later all three were on their feet, listening to the solemn words of the court that contained them to a lifetime in the penitentiary. When they were put down again they were all pale and trembling. The ordeal was too much even for their superb nerve. Old man Coughlin, the sturdy father of the chief conspirator, was sitting on one of the front benches, and in spite of himself tears came into his eyes as he saw his son marched back to the jail for the last time.

Kunze was brought back into court and Lawyer Donahoe made an effort to have him released on bail. Forrest offered to sign a bond for $1,000, but Judge McConnell thought that $5,000 would not be too much. This, Forrest said, was too much for him, and Kunze had to go back to confinement, buoyed by Judge Longenecker's vague promise that he may be liberated in a week.

Off for the Penitentiary.

Big Dan Coughlin, with his muscular frame, broad-shouldered Martin Burke, with his habitual smile, and swarthy Patrick O'Sullivan, with his familiar expression of wretchedness, parted company with little Kunze, their clownish fellow-defendant, and the rest of their acquaintances in the county jail Tuesday night and entered upon the service of the State under the sentence which imposes upon them imprisonment for life in the penitentiary at Joliet. The noted trio were taken from Joliet on the 9 o'clock Alton train. The removal of the prisoners was accomplished as speedily and secretly as possible after Judge McConnell had rendered his final decision. The authorities about the jail and the Criminal court made strenuous efforts to keep the news of the removal from the general public, and succeeded admirably.

About 8:30 the three men under sentence were brought from the cells in the county jail and heavily ironed. Carriages were in waiting and guarded by Sheriff Matson and an armed posse of deputies and police they were taken to the 9 o'clock Alton train.

The prisoners talked but little while on the way to the penitentiary. There was none of that running fire of conversation which made the journey of the "hoodlums" to the same destination so memorable. Indeed, nothing was said worthy of repetition, the entire conversation being confined to an occasional remark by some reporter or officer, and very short replies by the men in iron, who knew they were being closely watched and who were too shrewd or well-instructed, to say anything which they might regret.

Commented Their Life Sentence.

JOLIET, Ill., Jan. 15.—When the party arrived at the penitentiary at 10:30 none but the captain of the night watch greeted the delegation which reached the prison headed by Sheriff Matson. At the prison doors that officer, in a very formal and business-like way, turned the trio of Clan-na-Gael assassins over to Warden Berggren and the board of commissioners, who are in session. There was no ceremony whatever.

Warden Berggren at once turned the culprits over to Night Captain Norton, who deprived them of their valuables in the usual way and hustled them out of the big iron door down to the court solitary, where they were left for the night without change of clothes. The prisoners were left to themselves to indulge in silent thought upon their strange situation and to speculate upon the coming morning, when the heavy iron doors of the prison would open, and the stripes await them, with the no less important concomitant of a scientific disposal according to the forms of the Berrillon system of identification of criminals.

When the prisoners alighted from the train they all tried to brace up and make a strong effort to keep from showing any signs of weakness. They managed to succeed very well, except Coughlin, who when spoken to could not reply, but finally managed to stammer out, "Boys, don't talk to me; I am all broke up." It was more than he could bear, and the sympathy of his attendants was aroused for him to the highest pitch. Deputy Speers said he never saw a man so affected as Coughlin.

When the sheriff, Capt. Schuetter, and the rest of the officers had been good-bye to Burke and O'Sullivan only were able to stammer out an audible good-bye. In a few minutes however, after their entrance into the prison the prisoners had regained their composure and Coughlin nerved himself for the ordeal. So successful was he that Capt. Norton could not detect any signs of emotion as he consigned them to their solitary cells.

A careful observer of Burke and O'Sullivan would fail to detect from their outward appearance the internal emotions of either or whether they felt glad at their escape from the gallows or sad at the prospect of a life incarceration in the penitentiary. They did not dare, however, to talk, or would not. Coughlin's nerve forsook him for a few moments, but he rallied bravely. The correspondent tried to talk to them all, but Coughlin said: "Please don't talk to me." O'Sullivan said: "I can not speak to-night," and Burke said, without any visible signs of emotion: "Well, we are in for it, and must take our medicine, that's all, but it is not over with yet."

BRICE ELECTED SENATOR.

HE RECEIVES 78 OUT OF 144
VOTES.

Foster, the Republican Candidate, Polls 78 of the Opposition Votes.—The Iowa Legislative Record.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 15.—At noon Tuesday Calvin S. Brice was elected to the United States Senate, having received a majority of the votes cast in both branches of the Legislature.

In the Senate Mr. Shaw of the Lima district nominated Brice; Mr. Gaudner of Zanesville seconded the nomination.
Mr. Schneider of Cincinnati nominated Murat Halsted. This action was received with cheers, hisses and laughter.
The presiding officer gave notice that a repetition of the disorder would lead to the clearing out of the lobby.

Mr. Massie of Chillicothe nominated
ex-Gov. Foster.

The vote in the Senate resulted: Brice,
19; Foster, 14; Halsted, 1.

In the House Mr. Brown, (Dem.) of Hanock, who is sick, was carried to the hall in a chair. The only other Democrats absent were Messrs. Trogger, Holmes and Lawlor of Franklin, who is ill.
Messrs. Willis (Rep.) and Blair (Rep.) were absent. Mr. Hunt of Sanitary presented the name of Calvin S.

Brice, which was seconded by Bellefonte of Montgomery. Representative Braman named Charles Foster. This nomination was seconded by Representative Layton.

On the roll-call the vote of Mr. Congress for Mr. Brice was received with cheers, as was also that of Mr. Munson. These were the members who were credited with being bolters.

Smith, the third caucus bolter, voted for T. J. Neal, a strong Brice man, voted for Foster by mistake, and before he could make the correction the House was in an uproar. The Speaker threatened that the hall would have to be cleared unless order was maintained.

The result will be canvassed by the Senate and House in joint session Wednesday. The joint result of the two branches is: Brice, 78; Foster, 66; Halsted, 1, and Neal, 1.

The Iowa Deadlock.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Jan. 15.—After being called to order Tuesday the House began the fifth ballot for the election of secretary. The vote stood 50 to 50. After taking five more ballots without changing the result the House adjourned until 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Gardner of Washington county, a Republican, is quite sick, and occupied a cot in the hall of the House.

The first business in the Senate Tuesday was the swearing in of new members. After the introduction of a few resolutions the Senate adjourned until 2
p. m. to give the Democrats time to hold a caucus to nominate candidates for Senate positions.

Wilson Re-elected Senator.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 15.—The Senate and House met in joint session Tuesday and re-elected Ephraim K. Wilson (Dem.) United States Senator for the term of six years, beginning March 4, 1891. The Republican members cast their votes for the Hon. Thomas S. Hodson, of Somerset county. Mr. Wilson is the particular representative of the eastern shore in the upper House, and Congress, a peculiar State law requiring that one of the two United States Senators shall be an eastern shoreman.

A FIERCE BLIZZARD RAGING.

Drifts Twenty Feet High in Minnesota.
North Dakota Visited.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 15.—Severe weather is reported generally throughout the Northwest. A blizzard is raging at Beardsley, Minn., the drifts being pile up to a height of 15 feet. The wind accompanies the storm. Train and wagon traffic is at a standstill.

The first great storm of the season has struck Grand Rapids, extending all over the upper Mississippi valley. At New Salem the very air was darkened by falling snow, and pedestrians could not see their way before them. At Wabasha thirteen inches of snow has fallen. The highways are seriously blocked. The streets are being cleaned. From Roche, N.
D., comes an account of a veritable blizard, which raged for thirty-seven hours, rendering all travel impossible through the heavy drifts.

Storm at Ogdensburg.

OGDENBURG, N. Y., Jan. 15.—A terrible wind-storm swept over this city Monday afternoon, partly destroying the Methodist and Presbyterian churches, the Vermont railroad company's elevator, and one locomotive.

Many buildings were unroofed, destroying many thousands feet of lumber and sweeping a large portion of it into the St. Lawrence river. Telegraphic communication was completely interrupted. It was the worst wind-storm ever experienced in this portion of the State.

It is estimated that the damage done to this city and vicinity will amount to $100,000.

Waked Up Effectually.

A lethargic, dormant condition of the liver is hardly to be overcome with drastic cathartics and nauseous cholagogues. A gentler, pleasanter and far more effective means exists of arousing the organ from its torpid state. This is the Stomach Bitters, vouches for by the medical fraternity, tested by the public for many years. A resumption by the billary organs of its secretory function, with the activity attendant upon health, a return to regularity of the bowels, and a renewal of digestion, are the no less happy and certain results of using the Bitters systematically. Its laxative effect is never violent and distressing, its tendency being rather to perpetuate regularity than to produce a copious action.
Malarial, nervousness, debility, kidney troubles and neuritis it subdues effectually.

ODE TO LA GRIPPE.

BY A VICTIM.

What fills the land from west to east,
 That makes a man feel like a beast,
 And oft inclined to call the priest?
 La Grippe.

What makes him smile, chuckle and sneeze?
 What makes him shake in the knees?
 What's worse than California heat?
 La Grippe.

What racks his head with aches and pains,
 And oft his duodecim strains,
 And rattles and confounds his brains?
 La Grippe.

What leads him too, to bitters take
 Once every hour when he's awake?
 He says it's for his stomach's sake?
 La Grippe.

What makes him grieve and kick and wail;
 His children scold, his friends assail,
 And hourly tell the harrowing tale?
 La Grippe.

What would he warmly welcome meet
 With many a joyous huzzah and shout,
 If it would bring McGinty's ghost,
 La Grippe.

What causes many a joy and jest?
 What is the reason manifest
 That keeps bare firemen from the test
 La Grippe.

What makes us seek from pain release
 By using unguents, oils and grease
 Upon each damned up frontispiece?
 La Grippe.

And promised warm from Polar plains,
 Which ought to bring frost bites and 'mins,
 Why are they changed into mist and rains?
 It must be La Grippe.

What was the 'dons device,
 Which helped the statesmen get a slice
 In the campaign just won by Brice?
 It was his Grip.

What causes fevers, agues, chills,
 And makes demand for gin and pills,
 And makes the doctor's office thrills,
 La Grippe.

The doctor's boom joyful thrills,
 Because of his prospective bills,
 Whose size will bring the patient fills,
 La Grippe.

And lawyers come to make new wills,
 Or add to old ones codicils,
 What brings this long array of ills,
 Which nothing cures, which often kills?
 La Grippe.

We'd gladly see this trouble ship,
 And hear no more of French La Grippe.

Two days ago suffered from a complication of chronic ailments, and at sunrise on the morning of January 13, he passed away in sleep, without the quivering of an eyelid or the movement of a muscle.

A good woman, a devoted wife, a kind mother, a trusting Christian; may she rest in peace.
